Retiring Staff Members

RUSTEM AKSEL

Rustem Aksel is retiring from the Department of Genetics. He studied agronomy at the University of Jassy and then at the University of Ankara until 1938 when he graduated as Dip Ing Agronome and became assistant plant breeder at what is now the Ankara Institute for Agricultural Research. There, in 1953, he received his doctorate and became head of plant breeding and agrotechnical research and Assistant Director of the Institute. He was an Honorary Research Associate in the Genetics Department of this University between 1957 and 1966 and in 1968 became Assistant Professor in Genetics; in 1972 he became a full Professor.

Professor Aksel's research has been mainly on the inheritance of quantitative characters in cultivated plants. Working theoretically, he has devised a method for the study of the genetics of quantitative traits in wheat by means of chromosome substitution line crosses. In the formulation of the method he used a set-theory approach. He also has used a similar approach in subsequent theoretical work dealing with the analysis of quantitative-genetically non-equivalent reciprocal crosses in plants. Professor Aksel is the author or co-author of more than thirty papers.

Professor Aksel is now conducting research on the inheritance of characters in the crosses between spring and winter wheat varieties and in crosses between hexaploid and tetraploid wheats. He intends to continue this research.

HAROLD C. LOVE

Harold C. Love is retiring from the Department of Rural Economy. Professor Love received a BSc in 1933 and an MSc in Agricultural Economics in 1952 from the Kansas State University. In 1956 he received a PhD in Agricultural Economics from Iowa State University. He was on the staff at Kansas State University for several years and was Chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Houston, from 1957 until 1962. Since 1962 he has been Professor of Agricultural Economics at this University.

Professor Love has a special interest in production economics and farm management. He has organized and worked on team research projects with the Departments of Pedology, Plant Science, and Animal Science and with the Agricultural Research Station at Lacombe.

Between 1972 and 1974 Professor Love organized and headed the Department of Agricultural Economics of the University of Science and Technology at Kumasi, Ghana. This year he was in Indonesia for six months as a consultant on agricultural credit for a development feasibility study undertaken by CIDA, Alberta Agriculture, and the Indonesian government. Before returning to Alberta this summer, Professor Love will deliver a paper, "Agricultural credit in developing countries," at the International Association of Agricultural Economists in Nairobi, Kenya.

Professor Love plans to reside in Edmonton and to continue his association with the Department of Agricultural Economics after his retirement.
